Diana: I've re-read this multiple times, it has many classical poems in it that I love like "Charge of the Light Brigade". I re-read parts of it again for my Western Civilization class to compare and contrast 3 poems of the First World War that are in it. The most well known one In Flanders Fields by Lieutenant Colonel John McCrae, also I Have a Rendezvous with Death by Alan Seeger, both who took part in the war and were killed in action. The final The Spires of Oxford by Winifred M. Letts who wrote about those who died in the war from the view of one left behind.
